SELLING BRITAIN'S SOUL TO BRUSSELS

Betrayed again by Labour

by Steve Johnson

LABOUR HAS BROKEN its 2005 Election Manifesto pledge to let the people have their say on the new European Constitution. Gordon Brown's attempt to wriggle out of the promise by saying that the Lisbon Treaty he signed up to on October 19th is not the same as the Constitution, is a deliberate bare-faced lie.

A lie in which the EU bosses have tried to help him by wording the Lisbon Treaty of 2007 as a series of amendments to earlier treaties rather than as a straightforward document you can sit down and read through. But, when you put these amendments together, they create a new Euro-Constitution which is, according to the impartial Open Europe think-tank, 96% word-for-word identical to the 2004 Constitution the Labour Government promised the British people would be given a referendum on.

And other European leaders have been queuing up to confirm this.

■ "The substance of the 2004 Constitution is preserved. That is a fact." - German Chancellor Angela Merkel.

■ "We have not let a single substantial point of the 2004 Constitutional Treaty go." - Spanish Prime Minister Jose Zapatero.

■ "Only cosmetic changes have been made and the basic document remains the same." - Czech President Vaclav Havel.

■ "These changes haven't made any dramatic change to the substance of what was agreed on back in 2004." - the Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern.

■ "There's nothing from the original institutional package that has been changed." - Finland's European Affairs Minister Astrid Thors.

■ "The elements of substance of the Constitutional Treaty are preserved." - Prime Minister of Luxembourg Jean-Claude Juncker.

Only Gordon Brown of all the European leaders present made any attempt to pretend that the Lisbon Treaty was not essentially the same in word and intent as the 2004 European Constitution.

Not only is the Lisbon Treaty the 2004 European Constitution

Kirklees BNP councillors share in FOUR STAR award

KIRKLEES is one of the top performing councils in the country as judged by the public watchdog, the Audit Commission's own Comprehensive Performance Assessment (CPA), which aims to measure how well councils are delivering services for local people and communities.

Kirklees was awarded the highest rating of four stars following annual inspections on a range of individual service assessments conducted annually by the Commission plus the Office for Standards in Education, the Commission for Social Care Inspection and the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate.

It is welcome recognition of the effort of the hard-working BNP councillors on the councillors Colin Auty, Roger Roberts and David Exley - proving just how well BNP councillors work for their areas. The accolade is the highest that can be awarded to local councils, and Kirklees was the only council in the country to be awarded four stars for "capacity" - which covers everything done by the council on a day to day basis.

As the Leader of the council acknowledged, the award could not have happened without the hard work and dedication of "every single councillor". Colin Auty was especially delighted by the award:

"It just shows we must have worked hard between us, and we have. How it must rankle with our opponents that three BNP councillors are an integral part of their success."

WELL DONE: BNP councillors David Exley, Roger Roberts and Colin Auty.

Selling Britain's soul to Brussels

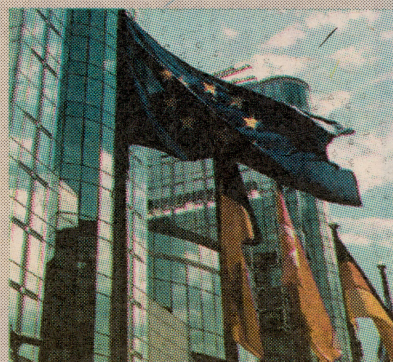

in the same words, it is the same European Constitution in its threats to what is left of British independence.

- A President of Europe, elected by the European 'Parliament'.
- A European Foreign Minister, with a staff of an extra 20,000 Eurocrats in the "EU Diplomatic Service".
- The EU gains the right to sign treaties on defence and foreign policy as well as trade. Britain, France and other member countries will cease to exist as independent entities on the world stage, with foreign and defence policy determined by Brussels.
- Massive loss of veto powers by Britain over EU Directives binding on us through our Courts.
- Massive gain in powers for the European "Parliament", which now gets the power to over-rule our own Parliament in 40 more areas.

And so on for 63,000 words of surrender and sell out of our sovereignty and national independence. Which Gordon Brown knows the British people would reject if they were given the chance. As the French and Dutch peoples did the first time round. But the British people can still have their say on the EU Constitution, and on a Labour Party that has exceeded even the squalid standards of modern British politics for bare-faced betrayal, broken promises and crass outrageous lying. Because even if you are denied your say in a referendum, you can still vote in local, Parliamentary and European elections.

The British National Party will not only give you a chance to say 'NO' to giving more power to Europe but a chance to say 'YES' to getting back the sovereignty Labour and Tory alike, egged on by the Lib-Dems, have already surrendered to Brussels. Together, we can make Gordon Brown and Labour pay for their lies and broken promises and take our country back!

SADIE GRAHAM: It was to her meeting that Geoff Hoon, a Government Minister, Labour Chief Whip and former Defence Secretary, was given the go-ahead to attend by Gordon Brown.

Hoon attends BNP councillor's meeting as ... Labour concedes defeat after 20 years of boycotting BNP

ON FRIDAY 5th October BNP councillor Sadie Graham, chaired her second Community Action Team meeting in her ward of Brinsley, Nottinghamshire.

The initial meeting held three months earlier attracted 26 residents and was the first meeting of its kind to be held in Brinsley. It highlighted the concerns of the locals and provided Cllr. Graham with a comprehensive list of problems that needed to be tackled.

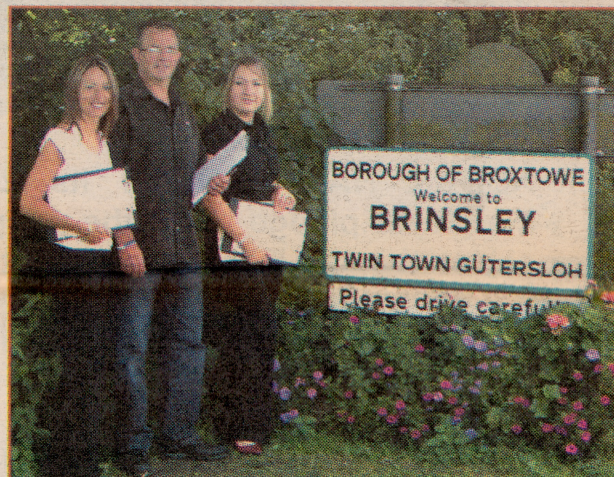

Since that meeting she has tasked herself with addressing these issues such as setting up a Neighbourhood Watch in the village, liaising with the police and council to tackle problems of anti-social behaviour and getting involved with new initiatives for younger people in the area.

The meeting on Friday attracted 50 local residents who attended to hear the progress that had been made since the last meeting and to raise other important matters. Also in attendance was the local Labour Party MP for Ashfield Geoff Hoon, who answered questions concerning police resources in the area, green belt development, economic immigration and housing.

It was a very clear sign of the progress made by the British National Party that a senior Minister, Labour Chief Whip and a former Defence Secretary, had been given the go-ahead by Gordon Brown to appear at a meeting organised by the British National Party.

It shatters once and for all the policy of "no platform" which for over two decades has been adopted by politicians of all three main parties, refusing to share a public platform with any representative of the British National Party.

The policy has led to scores of election meetings being cancelled along with numerous scheduled TV and radio debates in what was a desperate effort to deny the public any access to the political message of the BNP.

Sadie Graham invited Geoff Hoon to the meeting, not to score any political points but out of a genuine desire to allow a dialogue between the electors and the elected about the day to day issues of the local community.

Geoff Hoon attended because his Government knows it's futile to try to exclude the British National Party from the political process when voters across the country are turning to the BNP in ever increasing numbers.

BRINSLEY: It's not the clearest of photographs, but it's an historic one. Labour MP Geoff Hoon sitting next to Sadie Graham on the top table.

Righteous anger & political action

THE British National Party believes in telling the truth - even if it's sometimes uncomfortable to hear or even offensive to those who would rather bury their heads in the sand than face up to the problems in our society.

But while we often pass critical comment on the impact of mass immigration, multi-culturalism and even foreign religions on the indigenous people of our lands, we have no animosity towards immigrants, their descendants or the followers of non-native religions.

Nor do we intend to encourage others to feel such animosity, or believe that anything we have to say is likely to 'stir up hatred' against anyone. In fact, we believe that by providing a peaceful and constitutional outlet for the anger and frustration felt by millions of our people over the undemocratic transformation of our country by our political masters, the British National Party actually defuses tensions.

Where there is 'hate' we seek to turn it into righteous anger and political action against the only people who deserve to be hated - the politicians who use our taxes to turn our country into a place where we often feel like strangers in our own land.

BNP poll 35% in South Derbyshire

Church Gresley Ward

RICHARD FALLOWS narrowly missed out on becoming another East Midlands BNP Councillor when he polled 516 votes for a 35.4% share of the vote in Church Gresley ward on South Derbyshire District Council.

As the boxes were opened and the votes began to stack up it looked like we could win the ward at the first attempt but unfortunately we just weren't quite there this time.

A hard fought campaign has put us within a 4.2% swing of taking this seat next time, and whilst Richard was over the moon coming second and thrashing the Conservatives, he is now planning ahead to see what is needed to close the small gap and win this one when it's next up.

"The Labour candidate has made a lot of promises and I shall be making sure he keeps them," says Richard.

"I will be especially interested to know how he's going to keep the local Post Office open when it is his Labour Government that is so intent on closing it.

South Derbyshire has always been an area of promise but until recently we failed to capitalise on this. Only a little over a year ago we struggled to get anyone to even stand as a BNP candidate and yet we have now fielded three candidates, two in May who both polled in excess of 20%, and recorded the best ever BNP result in the East Midlands.

The British National Party is on a roll in South Derbyshire but we still need to raise our game to turn these close 2nd places into BNP councillors.

RICHARD FALLOWS: 516 BNP votes.

Defence cuts put our troops at risk

by Louise Scott

THE Royal Air Force will lose a quarter of its main bomber force and two bases in the latest round of Government cuts to the Defence budget.

Two Tornado GR4 squadrons are to be axed, reducing the RAF's frontline squadrons to just six, while a helicopter and a training base are to close with the land sold off to raise money.

The RAF cuts leave the service at a shadow of its former self and at the worst possible time with Britain involved in foreign wars on two fronts.

Defence analysts have described the axing of the Tornado G4 squadrons as "short-sighted" because the aircraft provides close air support which is a vital requirement in Afghanistan at the moment.

The squadrons expected to be scrapped are from RAF Marham in Norfolk and RAF Lossiemouth in Scotland. Each base has three squadrons which consist of 12 aircraft, 15 crews and four aircraft in reserve.

The bases which will close have not been officially announced, though it is believed that Odiham in Hampshire, where the RAF Chinook helicopters are based, is one of them - its position in the extended London commuter belt would make its sale very profitable. The most likely of Linton-on-Ouse in North Yorkshire, which is famous as a Second World War bomber station under the command of Arthur "Bomber" Harris, who was head of Bomber Command. Jet training would be amalgamated at RAF Valley, Anglesey. The moving of the Tucano trainers to Wales would be unpopular with Welsh farmers, who are unhappy about the extent of low flying aircraft over Wales.

The cuts are being implemented in spite of a lack of fast jets, which means that flying hours are already restricted in order to keep the older Harrier aircraft operational until 2017, when it is due to be replaced. The Harrier has been flying in Afghanistan, where its vertical take off performance has been an advantage.

TORNADO G4: It provides close air support for ground troops.

Another concern has been the sale of Tornado (Eurofighter) aircraft to Saudi Arabia. The government struck a deal to sell 75 aircraft, some of which are currently being used in Afghanistan. The Tornado, which will have to stay in service for another eight years because after the Saudi deal there won't be enough aircraft left to cover Britain's air defences! It's just more cavalier treatment of our dedicated armed forces by this appalling Labour Government.

Was it the BNP vote in Shepshed that put Brown off early poll?

LEICS COUNTY COUNCIL

Shepshed Ward

NO one will know quite how central the result of the Leicestershire County Council by-election in Shepshed was to Gordon Brown's decision not to call a November election.

What we do know is that the Labour Party's agent at the Shepshed called Downing Street with the result as it was announced and what he would have reported is that the British National Party had polled 20% of the vote and this was up NINE percentage points from the BNP's vote back in 2005.

With traditional Labour supporters deserting the Party in their droves, Brown was probably just as worried about losing votes in the North and Midlands to the BNP as he was to the Tories in the all-important Middle England marginals.

Charnwood BNP ran the Shepshed campaign and it was only the second time that it had stood a candidate in the area. With just four weeks for the campaign in a ward of 6,000 houses covering a large area, the branch got the message out to voters through leafleting rather than canvassing.

BNP candidate Julia Green, was delighted with the result:

"It was a fantastic achievement and I believe it is the highest ever County Council vote for the British National Party to-date," she told Freedom.

"Thanks to the efforts of a number of dedicated activists, we managed to poll a very respectable 20% share of the vote, leaving just 10% of votes between us and the Labour Party who won the seat.

"With more time and better preparation we could have won this seat or come a close second to Labour."

Labour thugs fail to stop BNP meeting in Broxtowe

KIMBERLEY TOWN HALL: A local family are stopped from getting into the meeting. ABOVE: The face of hate.

ON Tuesday 16th October, a mob of 70 Labour thugs tried to stop a meeting of Broxtowe BNP from going ahead.

Local officials and the invited speakers, Nick Griffin and Matt Single, together with several other members were in the venue and starting to set up the meeting when police warned them that there could be problems.

The mob that gathered outside weren't local people but Labour Party and Unison trade union officials from as far away as Leeds, London and Manchester.

By the time the meeting started there were just 28 British National Party members in the hall with another 75 outside unable to gain access.

Councillor Sadie Graham, speaking to Freedom the following day said:

"So many demonstrators turning out to oppose the BNP is evidence in itself of the growing amount of support we are gaining across the East Midlands. The Labour Party is really panicked by our progress.

"There were appalling scenes with an 87 year-old woman simply trying to enter into a perfectly legitimate political party meeting being pushed around and called 'nazi scum'.

"Such bully boy tactics only go to prove who the real democrats are and how completely out of touch these people are with the real worries of the British people.

"I have spoken to the Chief Inspector of Nottinghamshire Police about the failure of his officers to ensure the safe passage of our members into the meeting and he said that he will raise it in his debrief of the evening.

"The important thing was that the meeting went ahead and there was an excellent collection of over £230.

"When the meeting was over we all sang 'Jerusalem' with the doors of the hall held wide open, to let the mob outside know that their intimidation had failed."

LABOUR THUGS: Such bully boy tactics only go to prove who the real democrats are.

NINA BROWN: Delighted.

Broxtowe now a BNP branch

AT the eventful meeting in Kimberley, it was announced that the Broxtowe Group had become a BNP branch.

The group met all the necessary criteria, including standing a total of 11 candidates in the local elections in May.

Branch organiser Nina Brown, was delighted with the news:

"We hold regular leafleting sessions and as a result have seen a steady increase in new members," she told Freedom.

"We have built up the newspaper round across the borough and more people than ever before are coming forward and expressing an interest in standing at elections."

Subway in Rochdale converts to halal

SANDWICH retailer Subway has converted its popular Rochdale store into a halal provider.

The Rochdale store on Baillie Street will only serve its customers a range of certified halal meats, in line with strict Muslim dietary rules, including the banning of all pork products.

Franchisee Abi Adetujoye, said: "I am really excited about the new development. The other halal stores opened in the UK have become very popular and successful within their local communities."

"The Rochdale store will now provide the Subway chain's Muslim customers with a full range of Subs that are made fresh in front of them, just the way they like them."

It is not clear whether the Subway chain, which is one of the fastest growing food retailers in the UK with over 1,000 stores, will market its halal products in its usual trademark way. In most of the stores it has huge photos of the fresh food that is used in its rolls, but the sight of a sheep or cow being ritually slaughtered in order to show that the store is 'halal', might not go down too well with Britain's non-Muslim population.

SUBWAY FRESH: Just had its throat cut and bled to death in agony.

46% Send them back!

MORE than half of British citizens believe immigration is undermining our national identity.

In a survey carried out by French pollsters TNS Sofres, 52% said they wanted a complete end to immigration, and 46% said "a large number of immigrants should be sent back to their own country".

It also revealed worries of the growth of Islam with 49% seeing it as a threat.

Norfolk swamped

THE number of foreign children in Norfolk's schools has surged by 140% in just two years

The number of different languages spoken by the youngsters increased in one year from 88 to 101, while there are now 262 schools in the county teaching foreign children.

This places a huge burden on teachers trying to teach 2,682 children who can't speak English.

Medical students selective of patients

MUSLIM medical students are refusing to attend lectures or answer questions on issues connected with alcoholism and sexually transmitted diseases.

They are citing the Koran as their reason for refusing to treat patients of the opposite sex, and one male student was even prepared to fail his exam rather than have to examine a female patient.

The British Medical Council says such behaviour is not acceptable. It argues that refusing to treat patients on the basis of a person's gender, or whether or not their condition has been self-inflicted as a result of alcoholism, goes completely against "the most basic principles of ethical medical practice."

Race lobby hounds Nobel Prize winner out of Britain

He dared to mention racial differences

JAMES Watson, a Nobel Prize winner for his part in the unravelling of DNA in 1953 and who now runs one of America's leading scientific research institutions, has said that Western policies towards African countries were wrongly based on an assumption that black people were as clever as their white counterparts.

Dr Watson told The Sunday Times that he was "inherently gloomy about the prospect of Africa" because "all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours, whereas all the testing says not really". He said there was a natural desire that all human beings should be equal but "people who have to deal with black employees find this not true".

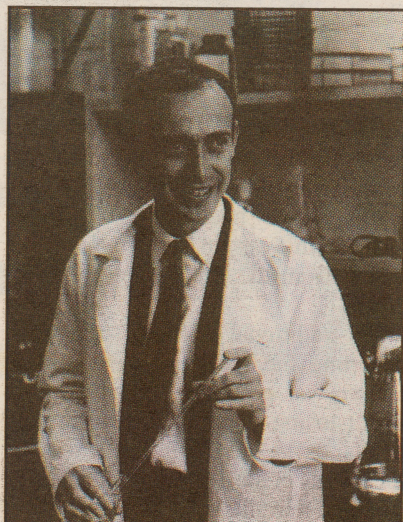

The veteran scientist was booked for a speaking tour of Britain but after protests from the race relations lobby he was forced to cancel and return home to the United States. His research institute has suspended him from administrative duties as Chancellor pending further investigations into his comments.

Leading the attacks on the Nobel Prize winner was David Lammy, the Skills Minister, whose family moved to Britain from the Caribbean. He said that the views expressed by Dr Watson were "his own irrational prejudices."

But there was support for him within the academic field.

Colin Blakemore, chief executive of the Medical Research Council and a professor of neuroscience at Oxford University said: "It would be a sad world if such a distinguished scientist was silenced because of his more unpalatable views."

Professor Richard Dawkins, who was due to conduct a public interview with Dr Watson in Oxford, condemned what he called "... the hounding, by what can only be described as an illiberal and intolerant 'thought police', of one of the most distinguished scientists of our time."

JAMES WATSON: He unravelled DNA in 1953 and won the Nobel Prize.

DAVID LAMMY: He condemned the scientist for "irrational prejudices."

The 'illiberal and intolerant hounding' of Dr James Watson is as much about warning other scientists not to research racial differences as it is about punishing the Nobel Prize winner for his remarks.

In the world of the likes of David Lammy everyone must believe that all races are absolutely the same and that black people are as intelligent as white, and that white people can run as fast as black people. Once those living in a multi-racial society begin to believe otherwise, that society will start to fragment.

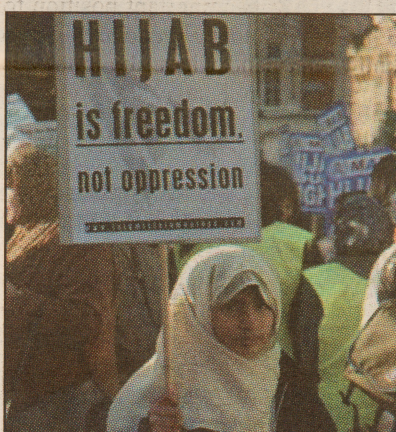

Police quiz parish priest over 'racist' church newsletter

A PARISH priest has been interviewed by police on suspicion of inciting racial hatred in his church newsletter.

Father John Hayes of St Mary's Church in Hornchurch, was quizzed after commenting on the case of a Muslim girl who went to court over her wish to wear a full veil in class.

Police turned up without warning at his presbytery after an allegation was made to Scotland Yard's 'hate crimes' unit, but this action was slammed by the Metropolitan Police Federation, which represents rank and file officers, as a gross error of judgment and an abuse of power. It accused the senior officer in charge as being "brain-washed by political correctness" and for him to explain his actions.

There was also anger amongst local residents who questioned why the authorities turn a blind eye to the inflammatory sermons by Muslim preachers yet found time to quiz Mr Hayes over his comments on dress code in schools.

True Brits in decline

IN Birmingham, Britain's second city, more than half of primary school pupils are from the ethnic minorities and it's not much better in Bradford.

A report from the Department for Children, Schools and Families found that 57% of children in Birmingham were from immigrant families and 43% in Bradford. And it's a grim picture overall with more than one-in-five youngsters classed as other than 'White British'.

Areas already lost to the indigenous population include Tower Hamlets in East London where just 15% of primary school children are 'White British' and 63% are Bangladeshi, and just up the road in the London Borough of Newham where just 12% of children can be classed 'true Brits'.

Looking after Queensbury

The BNP's Bradford City councillors Paul & Lynda Cromie

PAUL and Lynda Cromie are the two British National Party councillors for Queensbury ward on Bradford City Council. They were both born in Queensbury and have spent all their life in the ward including running their business there for the past 30 years. "This makes all the difference," says Paul. "Local people know us, they see us every day in the community and that is why they chose us to represent them on the council."

It was Paul who was elected first and he admits to having had a stressful first few months after being specifically targeted by an anti-BNP dirty tricks campaign.

"Firstly I was reported to the police for allegedly buying votes. The police didn't even bother to investigate the ridiculous allegation, but the local media used it for some unsavoury headlines.

"Then someone infiltrated my e-mail account and sent pornographic images to other councillors. This resulted in a Standards Board investigation which discovered the scam and cleared me of any wrong-doing.

"To top it off, last Christmas I was reported again this time for sending 200 pensioners living in sheltered housing in my ward a Christmas cards containing a fiver. The Standards Board investigated again and found that because of the lack of correct advice given to me by the head of the Council's Legal and Democratic Services, which I had requested, no action would be taken."

After all this, Paul was delighted that he was to receive some support when wife Lynda, was elected to the council in May 2007. She went straight into action with a successful campaign to have Roper Lane closed to heavy goods vehicles.

Lynda is now on the Bradford South area committee which allocates funds for work that needs to be done in this area, and she is also the opposition spokesperson on the Grants Advisory Board which allocates the funds to the area committee.

surgeries every month with the council sending out 400 posters a month for residents to display in their windows if they want a call. In a year they can almost cover the entire ward which is the most effective way to communicate with residents and find out their concerns.

"Often a two hour surgery turns into a five hour one," says Paul.

They also hold two venue surgeries a month which aren't so productive because it's the residents that have to do the travelling.

"We have gained a lot of people and achieved many beneficial changes for those who live in our ward. We are always on call and we hope that shows the people of Queensbury that we are doing to the best of our ability the job they elected us to do."

British National Party

WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and the scandal of bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the billions now wasted in foreign aid to fund generous 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the EU for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union to restore Britain's freedom. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside; a ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need, an end to field trials of GM crops and restoring our 200 mile fishing limit.

FAIR PLAY FOR ENGLAND: The setting up of an English Parliament to give England the same right of self-determination within the UK as enjoyed by Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A massive expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The adoption of popular referenda and high technology direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Armed Forces and cost thousands of jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last thing. Like all other democratic political parties, the BNP includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of the other parties. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

ELECTIONS MAY 2008

The British National Party made further progress along the road to gaining more political influence within our country with a very good set of local election results on May 3rd 2007. Now it is vital that we build on these gains. Next May there are the all-important London Assembly and London Mayor elections as well as another round of local elections. Funds are desperately needed to help finance this 'push for power'. Please help us all you can.

Jobs off to Poland

CADBURY is to axe 700 of its UK jobs and transfer production to Eastern Europe.

A factory at Keynsham, near Bristol, will close with 500 jobs lost and 200 more jobs will go at Bournville near Birmingham. Workers had thought that their jobs were safe, as there was no capacity to make the products elsewhere - but that was until Poland came into the equation.

The Keynsham factory was built on the site of Fry's chocolate factory, where sweets had been produced since 1919. It's more British jobs lost to Eastern Europeans. Whether it's migrant workers being recruited here at the expense of local people or British jobs being offshored to Eastern Europe - British workers are losing out.

600 more British jobs sacrificed on the altar of the global economy

by Tina Wingfield

SIX hundred workers in North Tyneside are to see their livelihoods shipped overseas as yet another global company ditches its highly skilled British workforce in pursuit of increased profits.

Despite receiving £28million in re-location grants courtesy of the British taxpayer, the American multinational Atmel, is selling its microchip factory at Silverlink, North Tyneside, to a business park developer. The equipment, no longer needed as production is to be transferred to Atmel's other operations in America and France, will be sold to a company in Taiwan. The Atmel corporation announced its intention to sell the factory last year, and reassured workers that "no jobs would be lost". The sale was necessary, it said, to stay competitive and "business would continue as usual".

Well, business may be continuing as usual for Atmel's greedy shareholders, with a bumper bonus of £60million to replenish the corporate trough, but life will deteriorate dramatically for the 600 British workers who have been unceremoniously dumped on the dole.

Whilst they struggle to find work appropriate to their skills with the ever-decreasing number of manufacturing companies who have yet to bin Britain and join the global game, our 'champion of the workers' Labour Prime Minister Gordon Brown, has only empty sound bites to offer. 'British jobs for British workers' he bleats, yet because he is merely parroting a policy that his PR people advise is popular with the public, he takes no action to protect the British economy. The simple fact is that if we are to maintain our current standard of living, we cannot compete in the global market. We are not contesting a level playing field, as there will invariably be an economic imperative to base production outside of Britain: cheaper wages, better distribution networks, economies of scale, more appetizing government sweeteners and so on.

The solution is equally simple. If we can't compete, then we should cease this futile sacrifice of the British workforce on the altar of competition and withdraw from the global game. Taking Britain out of the European Community, ring-fencing public money for British owned companies, and introducing tax incentives to promote the growth of British-based manufacturing, is the only way to protect our workforce and ensure that further job losses are avoided.

Britain's only integrated Aluminium mill closes

BITAIN'S only integrated casting and rolling aluminium mill is to close with the loss of 170 jobs.

Despite having a full order book, administrators say the Dolgarrog Aluminium factory in the Conwy Valley in north Wales has serious cash flow problems and must cease trading. Dolgarrog Aluminium produces a range of products to industries including electrolytic zinc extraction and aerospace engineering, turning over £19 million last year, and is a major employer in the area.

It's a massive blow to the workforce which earlier this year was celebrating 100 years of aluminium making on the former Alcoa site.

How big business helps promote the European Union

THE European Union spends £40 million of taxpayer's money each and every year on self promotion in an attempt to keep the public pliant to the continual erosion of the sovereignty of member countries.

It is aided and abetted in this campaign by big business which in its own subtle ways seldom misses an opportunity to promote the EU.

Take Toyota for instance. When selling cars in Britain, the company claims that GB number plates are supplied as standard to all its cars. But Toyota's idea of a GB number plate is very different to that of the vast majority of British people. A GB number plate in Toyota's parlance means a European Union flag (ring of stars on blue background) with GB underwritten in white.

This of course is disingenuous. It misleads customers in effect forcing them to promote the European Union on their cars with a Euro flag. Most people buying a Toyota are led to believe they are getting a UK national flag on their number plate and only find out that it is actually the EU flag when the vehicle is delivered and it's too late to change it.

It is a deliberate ploy on behalf of Toyota to call EU number plates GB plates and it doesn't end there.

Anyone trying to avoid an EU number plate by going to a motor store will find they are thwarted there too. These shops can only provide EU plates off the rack and a GB plate has to be sent away for with this taking 7-10 days from placement of the order to delivery.

GB PLATE: With the now compulsory EU flag courtesy of Toyota.

What is taking place here is a multinational corporation at work promoting the New World Order of which the EU is a vital part. Democracy and accountability are of no interest to the power elites who control big business. In fact democracy and accountability to the public are a positive nuisance and a drag on business.

It is no coincidence that the regulations that affect big business to the detriment of small family run businesses are usually drawn up by big business and adopted by the European Union and its sister global trading blocks.

So if you are surprised at the number of EU plates on cars on British roads don't be. This is not a sign that the driver in any way supports the European Union, it is just that they have been unable to get any non-EU number plates.

EU wants more immigration

A HUGE increase in the level of immigration into Britain is expected after the European Union announced it is to relax controls and open EU borders to an extra 20 million workers from Asia and Africa over the next two decades.

The new policy, which marks a renewed push to encourage member states to adopt a single fast-track immigration policy was announced by Franco Frattini, the EU justice commissioner. He said:

"We have to look at immigration as an enrichment and as an inescapable phenomenon of today's world, not as a threat." But with growing signs that the world economy is about to go into reverse after years of growth, the Commission's proposals could provide the spark that ignites tensions in parts of Europe already under stress from the EU's open door approach.

Cunard ships to be built in Italy

by Louise Scott

CUNARD, the shipping company established in 1838, has awarded the contract to build its latest ships to an Italian shipbuilder.

Cunard is famous for its ocean liners, including the Queen Mary (now a hotel in Long Beach, California) and the QE2 which were both built at the John Brown Shipyard in Clydebank and then were based in Southampton.

However, in recent years, the company has looked abroad for its ships. The Queen Mary 2 was built in France, and the new ships commissioned for the company - the Queen Victoria and the Queen Elizabeth - will be built by Fincantieri in Venice and Monfalcone respectively, in a deal which gives the Italian company 40% of the market share.

Both ships will be based in Southampton and will fly the Red Ensign. What a pity that the British flag will not be attached to a British-built ship. The UK shipbuilding industry has been systematically destroyed, just like other British manufacturing industries, by inept Labour and Tory Governments.

NO WAY OUT: Would you want this outside your home? Cars completely block the driveway of the bungalow, INTIMIDATION: Gangs of Asian youths appear to be targeting white households in order to drive them out.

Nightmare in Rotherham

Council frightened to act for fear of losing Asian vote

LIFE for a Rotherham couple in their beautifully cared for detached bungalow in what was once one of the town's most exclusive areas, has been turned into a living hell by those using garages that back on to the couple's drive.

For the last FIVE years, car repairs and car dismantling has been carried out on their doorstep. Car parts have been left strewn around and there's even been a number of car fires that got very close to the bungalow's garage. The majority of the vehicles are untaxed and others appear to have been just dumped there to be used for spare parts.

When the couple complained to those working in the garages they were threatened with violence, and when they complained to the police, a paving stone was thrown through their window in the early hours of the following morning.

A year ago, the couple did manage to gain an enforcement order from the council which stated that untaxed and unroadworthy cars must not be kept there. But it made no difference.

They approached the local press but they didn't want to know and neither did the police who said the dispute was a civil matter. On top of this the council didn't implement its enforcement order.

Rotherham BNP organiser Marlene Guest, is now trying to help the distraught couple.

"It's a desperate situation. They want to leave but any potential buyer viewing the property would be put off by the 'scrap yard' next door," Marlene told Freedom.

"I'm afraid this is about the authority's fear of taking on the culprits because they are Asian. If the people causing these problems were White, it would have been dealt with years ago."

And Marlene says there have been a string of similar complaints from her constituents over the council's refusal to act when the regulations have been flouted by Asians.

"Planning applications seem to be the main area of dispute," says Marlene. "The council is ruthless when dealing with transgressions by local people, but where transgressors are from an ethnic minority, they always seem to be treated more leniently."

Even more of a worry is how White families are being hounded out of the Asian areas of Rotherham. Marlene explained:

"It's a sinister development. Black paint is daubed on windows, drainpipes are pulled down and there's physical intimidation by gangs of young men - but the powers that be do not have the guts to intervene."

"Rotherham's Labour Council and the three Labour MPs seem only interested in securing the mass Asian vote and will do nothing that might jeopardise that support."

MARLENE GUEST: White families in dispute with Asians are losing out.

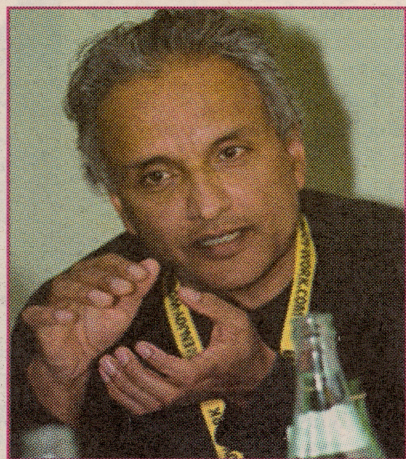

Alcohol concession

MUSLIM supermarket checkout operators are to be allowed to refuse to handle alcoholic drinks.

Sainsbury's will allow the Muslim staff to raise their hand so that a non-Muslim colleague can come to the checkout and scan the offending items for them.

Muslims will also be allowed to refuse to stack shelves with wine, beer and spirits. Sainsbury's says it is very keen to accommodate the religious beliefs of its Muslim staff.

Race lobby sets its sights on Britain's architects

PRASAD: Making race an issue.

by Peter Phillips

JUST two weeks after taking office on 1st September as President of the Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA), Sunand Prasad, the first ethnic minority president, is making race an issue.

Prasad is also advocating moves to globalise the institute and believes that this can be done by architects in countries such as India, from where he originates, being offered cut price international membership. With equal voting rights British members could soon find themselves outvoted in their own institute.

Prasad also said that the RIBA should not get involved in politics, and during his one year term as President-elect he also said that he opposed positive discrimination.

However, now speaking as president at this year's 'Stephen Lawrence memorial lecture' at the institute's headquarters, Prasad argued that the British architectural curriculum was acting as a barrier to ethnic minority participation.

Prasad went on to say that schools of architecture "mostly study white architects and white architecture" and in the typically obscure language of 'race-relations-speak' added that a "little mix of culture and different cultural solutions will benefit everyone".

In a world where architectural design is now largely international it is difficult to see what he means by this. Not surprisingly his comments were reportedly endorsed by the Society of Black Architects.

This all supplements demands made by another 'political' architect, Richard Rogers, who last year advocated positive discrimination in architectural employment.

It is clear from all this that the RIBA is steadily being politicised by the liberal Left and the politically correct brigade who have been emboldened in their efforts by the presence of a member of an ethnic minority at the profession's helm for the next two years.

NHS IN CRISIS

by Tina Wingfield

Failure of hospitals to look after our elderly

HUNDREDS of older people in hospital wards across England are being treated without dignity, adequate privacy and due care. This is the shocking conclusion reached in a report by the Healthcare Commission on conditions in hospitals.

Seventeen out of the twenty-three hospitals investigated, which included seven of the Government's flagship foundation hospitals - supposedly the best performers in the country - failed to comply with core standards for dignity in care.

Despite all of the investigated hospitals having declared themselves in full compliance with dignity standards in this year's self-assessments, researchers found that weak and vulnerable elderly patients were being left to try to feed themselves, subjected to the indignity of mixed-sex wards and forced to use dirty, poorly maintained toilet facilities.

This failure of care in our hospitals is especially worrying given that more people are living beyond the age of 100 than ever before. According to official figures there has been 90-fold increase in the number of centenarians since 1911. The over-90s are now the fastest-growing age group and the NHS is likely to come under enormous pressure in the coming years.

Having paid a lifetime of national insurance contributions our elderly folk are entitled to expect a service that accommodates all their needs. To be treated with dignity and respect is the very least they deserve for a lifetime of service to this country.

Betrayal of our junior doctors

THE Labour Government's rushed reforms of postgraduate medical training were responsible for the fiasco earlier this year which left thousands of junior doctors unable to continue their training.

An independent report by the Medical Schools Council into the crisis created by the implementation of Labour's five-year programme to modernise medical training has accused the then Health Minister, Patricia Hewitt, of failing to take account of the fact that ten thousand applicants had arrived from abroad to take up junior doctor posts.

In addition to technical problems with the new highly complex online applications system (which was eventually abandoned altogether), around 30,000 junior doctors found themselves competing for just 23,000 specialist training posts in hospitals across Britain. Many home-trained doctors missed out on these essential appointments and are now unable to complete their qualifications for consultant jobs.

The report called for a radical overhaul of the whole system and warned that the Government must address its 'policy vacuum' regarding the massive increases in trainee numbers fuelled by overseas applicants.

Thousands of pounds worth of NHS revenue is being invested in training British doctors, and it is scandalous that their progression into specialist medical practice is being jeopardised by a Government that is too weak to protect its own workforce and too greedy to prevent the poaching of much needed medical staff from Third World countries.

Trafalgar Club Dinner Weekend '07

by Jennie Noble

IN 1805, just as today, the British people were 'denied a choice' on whether they wanted to become part of a Europe under foreign control.

Back then, Lord Nelson won great naval victory over the French and Spanish fleet at the Battle of Trafalgar on October 21st which meant that Britain was able to 'opt out' of another undemocratic kind of enforced European constitution, and thus ensured that Britain would be free to choose its own destiny.

It is to celebrate Nelson's legacy to the British people that members of the Trafalgar Club meet for an annual dinner which takes place on a Saturday as near as possible to the date of the battle.

By convention, it is held at a different location each year, and the Sunday morning after the dinner involves a group visit to places of historical interest in that locality.

Past venues have included Portsmouth, Retford, Gloucester, Wakefield and of course, in 2005 (the bicentennial anniversary of Trafalgar), in Norfolk, the birthplace of Nelson. This year it was held in the beautiful rural countryside of Warwickshire, and with a tour of Shakespeare's Stratford-upon-Avon on the Sunday.

Over 100 members and their guests gathered on Saturday 20 October for the black tie dinner. The TC as it is known to members is the fundraising arm of the BNP and the after dinner speaker is always the Chairman of the Party, Nick Griffin.

Each table was named after a ship that took part in the battle and it was certainly befitting that our Chairman was seated at the "Victory" table! Other famous ships such as Achilles, Britannia, Colossus, Dreadnought, Conqueror, Defiance, Neptune, Revenge and Thunderer were also represented.

Members from all corners of the UK attended and were treated to a sumptuous three course dinner in a luxurious four-star hotel, with a lakeside terrace, surrounded by acres of peaceful countryside.

The main prize in the Raffle, donated by the Chairman, was three bottles of champagne (Red, White and Blue) which were a gift to him at his trial last November, from Jean-Marie Le Pen; the champagne having come from his French vineyard.

What makes the Trafalgar Club so special? Meeting up with old acquaintances and new friends for a lively and interesting evening. The knowledge that much needed TC funds are used to help the Party to achieve its major objectives. Who knows, the event may actually be held on a ship next year!

Insensitive or what?

Islam's propaganda assault on London rides roughshod over the feelings of the families of the victims of the terrorist attack

ON the 7th July 2005 in London there were a series of terrorist bomb blasts that hit London's public transport system during the morning rush hour.

At 8:50am, three bombs exploded within fifty seconds of each other on three London Underground trains. A fourth bomb exploded on a bus nearly an hour later at 9:47am in Tavistock Square. The bombings murdered 52 commuters and badly injured 700. It was the deadliest attack on London since a V2 rocket killed 131 people in Stepney on 27 March 1945, near the end of World War II.

In a taped message left by bomber Mohammad Sidique Khan in an attempt to try to explain his actions to the public, he said:

"Our religion is Islam, obedience to the one true God and following the footsteps of the final prophet messenger."

Shehzad Tanweer also recorded his spiritual motivation for the attack:

"We are 100 per cent committed to the cause of Islam. We love death the way you love life."

CARNAGE: A London bus has been ripped apart by a suicide bomber.

There should, of course, be an outcry that an organisation with the political agenda of rehabilitating the Islamic religion within the eyes of the British people, has been allowed to cover London's tube trains and buses with its pro-Islam message.

You would have thought that someone at London Transport would have voiced their concerns that this was a step too far and would be inconsiderate of the feelings of the families of the 52 people murdered and 700 injured by the suicide bombers.

But obviously no one did. There were probably numerous people who privately thought it was the wrong thing to do, but each of them were too frightened to say anything in case they were branded a 'racist' and 'Islamaphobe', and removed from their job before their feet could touch the ground.

Yearning for the BBC documentaries of Baxter and Burke

by Ralph Ellis

BBC documentaries are not what they used to be.

I've just watched one supporting the proposed Severn Barrage which will harness the tides to help with our energy needs. Sadly the programme failed to address one rather important problem which could undermine the whole project.

The tides in the Severn turn four times a day, so there will be four periods each day when the Barrage will be unable to produce any electricity. The National Grid will come under increased pressure during these flat spots and alternative sources of energy will need to be found.

The Dinorwig plant at Llanberis, a pumped storage plant, is already fully utilised in smoothing out demand, but this will not be able to cope with fluctuations in supply of up to 15% capacity coming and going from the barrage. The only answer appears to be another fossil-fuel burning power station linked in to the Severn Barrage supply to fill the energy gaps and stop the National Grid from tripping off and electrical supplies failing completely. Once a power outage starts, it can ripple across the country as was illustrated by the New York blackout of 2003.

Britain does need to utilise its renewable energy resources but I have my doubts that the Severn Barrage is worth such substantial investment.

Another BBC documentary about the Windscale fire at the current Sellafield site back in 1957 was also flooded by its inference throughout this film that there could have been a nuclear explosion. It almost seemed as though this was a deliberate ploy to scare the public off nuclear power.

I am assured that such an

SEVERN BARRAGE: Tidal concerns must be taken into account before it is given the go-ahead.

WINDSCALE: The old cooling tower stood for 50 years after the fire.

explosion would be an impossibility of physics. Nuclear material has to be enriched before it makes an atomic bomb and it hadn't been at Windscale. There could have been a melt down or a graphite-steam explosion just like at Chernobyl. Now while this would be a catastrophe that spreads nuclear material around the land it is NOT the same as a nuclear explosion which would have levelled to the ground most of West Cumbria and beyond.

These two disappointing documentaries made me realise just how much I miss those informative, well-researched and intelligent BBC documentaries of the past with authoritative presenters such as Raymond Baxter and James Burke.

SALLY WOOD Straight talking!

Survival of the feckless

IT WAS on Radio 4's Any Questions that the panel were asked whether the popularity of the Conservative Party's policy on Inheritance Tax signalled the end of the desire for a more equitable society here. In response a caller rang in to say that he did not believe it right for people to pass on any of their wealth to their children as it was not fair on those who were unable to do so.

The fact is we already pass on something to our children, and that is our genes, and some are able to pass on a combination of advantageous genes, whereas others have the misfortune to pass on some undesirable ones, but that's life and life isn't fair. It's survival of the fittest, and it's how life got from bacteria to homo sapiens. Not that life however is all brutality and selfishness: we see around us in the natural world examples of different species entering into symbiotic relationships to their mutual advantage, and man is known to be a social animal and capable of great acts of altruism.

IMMIGRATION: The British people have never been consulted over it.

It is interesting to note however that the more diverse a country's population the less socialist it tends to be. The US is a prime example of a diverse state that has never adopted the generous welfare benefits to the same degree as we have here; and even within the British Isles the Celtic countries, which have had less diversity inflicted upon them than England, tend to be more socialist.

On the recent Channel 4 Dispatches programme on immigration we were shown a Somali lady complaining that the £33,000 she received in welfare benefit a year for her and her five children was insufficient for her needs. Now I have not been consulted on whether I wanted her to come and live in my country, nor was I party to her decision to have five children (something that I could not afford), and yet I am expected to support her and her family through my taxes.

This is not survival of the fittest, but survival of the feckless!

Taxing the fittest

ACCORDING to The Guardian, the Jamaican Government is Unhappy at the rise in the flow of deportees to its shores. Apparently Britain and America are returning to Jamaica its criminal element of illegal immigrants after having served their sentences.

Whilst it is heartening to think that our Government is finally deporting those criminals who are in the country illegally, it would save the taxpayer a considerable sum if those who had committed offences found deportation to be their punishment. That would obviate the need for a costly period of time served in our jails.

One of those deported from the US was Courtney Francis, a crack cocaine dealer from New York who has left behind 16 children. What would Charles Darwin make of that? When he wrote his Origin of the Species it was based on the belief that nature's stock gradually adapts through the process of survival of the fittest. It would never have occurred to him that the fittest today would turn out to be the criminal element.

BURDEN: Jamaican women drug smugglers fill our prisons and the taxpayer is footing the bill again for training the Jamaican police.

If success or failure is purely based on the ability to produce thriving offspring then today we are certainly ensuring that those who have the least to offer are achieving the greatest success in this field.

It was also of interest to read that our Government has spent millions on training, equipping and funding Jamaica's police force. I was under the impression that Jamaica was no longer a colony. If that's the case why are we ploughing all this money into an independent country's police force when we never seem to have sufficient funds to maintain our own to an adequate standard?

It seems that this Government's taxation policy operates to assist those who have a fertility rate that nature would categorise as being successful, yet all the while it bleeds the rest of us dry, directing us down the path towards nature's failure.

No outdoor play restricts a child's personal development

by Tina Wingfield

ALACK of appropriate play opportunities for children is restricting their personal and emotional development and will leave a long-term social legacy of under-developed and over-sized adults.

That's the warning from Play England, an agency researching into play provision.

Figures collated this summer show that only 21% of children are allowed to play outside of the home, compared to 71% of their parents' generation. There are a number of key factors combining to restrict children's access to independent, energetic and imaginative play. First and foremost, parents are concerned for the safety of their children and tend to follow the rule that 'if they can't be seen, they may not be safe'. Trips to the local park, adventure walks and games in the street, activities commonplace for previous generations of children, are considered too risky for children living in Britain today.

In addition to parental concern is the ever-decreasing number of parks, school playgrounds and outdoor play facilities available to children, as local authorities squeeze more new housing developments into our already over-crowded, over-concreted towns and cities.

To compensate for the lack of outside play opportunities, parents draw on their consumer power, providing children with the latest toys

PLAY AREAS: Sacrificed for new housing.

No playground

THE Thomas Deacon Academy in Peterborough, Britain's most expensive academy 'super school' (built to replace three separate schools at a cost of £46.4m) was designed without a playground for students.

"We are not intending to have any playtime," explained Academy head Alan McMurdo.

"The absence of a playground will avoid the risk of numbers of children running around in breaks... youngsters can play in their own time, in their own communities."

and gadgets for the home in the hope of meeting, at least, their need for imaginative (if not energetic and independent) play. A well-meaning but essentially flawed strategy because the more a toy does, the less imagination is required.

Outdoor play is an instinctive and essential part of childhood and, if we are to save our children from their currently forecast future of stunted social development and obesity, we must ensure they have access to safe, local facilities.

Asian invader targets British ladybirds

by Louise Scott

THE British ladybird, one of our most distinctive insects and a favourite with gardeners due to its appetite for aphids, is under threat from an Asian form of the species. The harlequin ladybird was only discovered in the UK in 2004 and in some areas it already outnumbers the British ladybird. It feeds on ladybird larvae, other ladybirds and butterfly eggs, meaning that, as well as being a threat to our own ladybird, it is also a danger to our butterflies.

This Asian immigrant will also bite

UNDER THREAT: British ladybird.

HARLEQUIN: Unwanted immigrant.

humans, in some cases causing an allergic reaction. They have been found in London, the South East and as far north as Durham.

The harlequin competes with the native ladybird for food, as well as feeding on them, and it is feared that our ladybird will suffer the same fate as our native red squirrel has at the hands of the imported grey.

Experts say there are now serious concerns over the future of several species of our traditional British ladybird.

Green belt under threat in Leeds

AREAS of farmland and greenfield sites around Leeds will have to be used for development in order to meet new housing targets.

The Government wants an extra 22,000 homes a year to be built in Yorkshire to meet increased housing needs.

Chris Beverley, a BNP councillor on Leeds City Council slammed the Labour Government's revised targets because it means building on green belt sites.

"The reason behind the need for these thousands of extra homes is immigration which has swamped housing waiting lists. "In the interests of the people of Leeds, the city council has got to tell the Government that it won't build on the green belt and that this country's housing crisis can only be solved by stopping any further immigration."

The Quiet Revolution

THROUGHOUT THE four weeks of the Church Gresley by-election campaign, the media had been full of news of Labour and the Tories. Hours of detailed discussion on their policies and the personalities that lead them. You would have thought with all this focus on the two parties, and the fact that just the two of them contested the last election for the South Derbyshire seat, that Church Gresley would have been a two horse race. The BNP, which didn't get a mention in the media unless it was a smear story, shouldn't have had a look in!

But the result, as can be seen on page two was surprising with BNP candidate Richard Fallows polling 35.4% and pushing the Tories into third place. The Labour vote was down 24% and the Tories down 12% from what it was just four months ago.

It was an incredible result for the BNP in a ward never fought before and it maintains a run of excellent election results for the Party since the May 2007 local elections. Something is shifting in British politics, it might be slow but it's sure and it is being built on firm foundations. I call it the Quiet Revolution because it is being deliberately ignored by the media for fear of fanning the flames of our progress. As I have mentioned in a previous editorial, our opponents are petrified of the BNP Bounce. But this 'head in the sand' media approach suits us at the moment. The British National Party is still laying foundations in many parts of the country, built by strong and dedicated activists who have seen through the anti-BNP propaganda and joined our campaign. These are people who really care about our country whether to do so is fashionable or not. Once the BNP gets promoted in the media, and becomes 'fashionable', we will be swamped by the opportunists and careerists who are only interested in what the BNP can do for them and not what they can do for the BNP.

It's not a baby boom!

THE OFFICE for National Statistics has reported that increased immigration and a high immigrant birthrate will push the population of the British Isles to 75 million by 2051. That's up from last year's total of 60 million and more than double the recommended population for the UK as suggested by population experts at the Optimum Trust.

This increase will be the equivalent of building two new cities the size of London in our countryside. The demand generated will push housing, transport and public services to breaking point and our present predominantly White society will have been lost forever.

What irritates me is that our experts claim that it is a 'baby boom' among immigrant women that has forced the statisticians to raise their estimate for the birthrate of the entire population.

"Foreign-born women living in the UK have, on average, 2.2 children. Pakistani-born women living here have an average of 4.7, whereas British-born women have only 1.6. Last year, 22% of UK births were to foreign-born women," reports the newspaper.

"It's not a baby boom", I feel like shouting. "It's just the normal birthrate for immigrant women, and back in their own countries it is even higher!" Most people knew this back in 1972 when immigration from Asia started with a vengeance. Only our Labour and Conservative politicians have seemed unable to grasp that fact.

Room for the migrants

GRADUALLY the truth is emerging about the dreadful effects of forty years of abortion on demand in Britain.

A law which was passed in 1967 to deal with a small number of 'problem pregnancies' and back street abortionists is now being used against the British people to clear a space for the massed waves of immigrants which this Labour Government hopes will keep them in power indefinitely. The Catholic weekly magazine The Tablet reported on 20th October: "The Guild of Catholic Doctors put forward the theory that 40 years of abortion 'on demand' had led to the loss of 6 million citizens, diminishing the country's capability to look after itself without outside help and leading to the large requirement for immigration." There you have it in a nutshell. The government and ruling elite of Britain is implicit in a crime against humanity and has acquiesced in the slaughter of 6 million British innocents which has so denuded our country of young citizens that they are now importing 200,000 plus foreigners every year to make up the shortfall!

John Maddox, London

New divide & conquer

SO just who is benefiting from mass immigration?

The answer is simple. The immigrants who are paid three times the equivalent rate they would earn in their own country, greedy bosses who are increasing their profits by using this cheap foreign labour, and private landlords who are buying up the homes that should be going to British first time buyers and filling them with migrant workers.

It's a new divide and conquer strategy, a consensus between lazy liberalism and global capitalism.

Clare Latimer, Beckenham.

Our Falklands oil

I understand the thinking behind the Peak Oil issue from an energy independence standpoint but why is there never any mention in the debate of the 60 billion barrels sitting down in the North Falklands basin.

There is possibly more oil in our sector of the South Atlantic than in Saudi Arabia. Surely the BNP should be taking the lead on this issue to ensure that the British people benefit from this and cease to have to rely on other countries for our energy requirements

Ian Gorman, Cardiff.

LETTERS to the Editor

freedom@bnp.org.uk

Gaunt is just a fake

I OCCASIONALLY e-mail Jon Gaunt on Talk Sport and my points sometimes get an airing.

I even called the show when the BNP was being discussed and asked why Nick Griffin wasn't on. Gaunt had bragged: "I'll 'ave Griffin on! No bother" - I think it's all just for effect. The whole station is low rent with expensive text charging to contact the show, adverts and premium rate competitions. Gaunt constantly plugs The Sun and his book.

He was better on BBC London a few years ago when he took 10 times as many calls from listeners who he allowed to express their legitimate worries that other politically correct presenters wouldn't allow. Since then he has become more ubiquitous, trawling around daytime TV talk shows, Sky News, and Newsnight as a sort of celebrity agitator. But he has lost the plot and deserted the white working class for his own financial gain. I think he is for himself and must be regarded as a fake.

Rory Allanson, London.

Education irony

I WONDER how many other readers watched the five-minute Labour Party Broadcast which coincided with its recent annual conference.

Prime Minister Gordon Brown was filmed in a primary school classroom talking to some of the children. What particularly caught my attention was a wall poster in the background, made by one of the children. The poster stated "I wish to fulfill my dreams". The word fulfil was spelt incorrectly. The fact that the poster was on display on the classroom wall implies that it had been approved by the teacher, who presumably was blissfully unaware of the spelling error it contained.

In view of the Government's 'spin' about its concern for education and the three Rs, is it not a poignant irony that not only the children and their teacher, but also the makers of the TV programme in question, failed to spot this spelling mistake?

Such are the incongruities in Labour Party propaganda.

Dr A Emerson, Chichester

Behind Migrationwatch

REGARDING Andrew Green of Migrationwatch, I always thought the one thing that singled him out from the Littlejohns of this world was that he didn't criticise the BNP as his get out clause.

Richard Littlejohn will write his articles on Labour's disastrous immigration policy but then in summing up will attack the "knuckle dragging morons of the BNP" to balance his article and nullify its effect. He leads his readers up the hill and then leads them right back down again.

Up until now I hadn't seen this tactic from Andrew Green.

Recently my father, a British National Party member, had a letter published in the Blackpool Gazette.

A few days later he received a letter from Migrationwatch to say Andrew Green had seen the letter and then it asked for a donation. Included with the letter was a profile of Green, which included under the heading 'worst of times' for Migrationwatch was: "Receiving the glowing, rapturous support of Nick Griffin and the British National Party".

So there we have it. Andrew Green is quite happy to take money from BNP supporters on the one hand, but then talks about the Party in derogatory terms on the other.

It's proof that he is all about the problems of immigration without being able to offer any solutions.

James Clayton, Blackpool.

Philip's recovering well

ON Saturday 29th September, I ran a BNP stall in Canvey Island, selling Freedom and giving out our literature.

It is something that we do most weeks, visiting a different area in our part of Essex to meet people and promote the British National Party.

On this occasion we were halfway through the morning when Philip Howell, one of Basildon's most loyal and dedicated activists, was taken ill and rushed to hospital. The incident caused quite a commotion and a number of people were concerned about what happened and ask about Philip's condition. I can report that he did suffer a heart attack but the good news is he has responded to treatment and it appears he is making a good recovery.

We look forward to the day when Philip will be able to rejoin us on Basildon BNP's mobile Freedom stall.

Len Heather, Basildon.

WAITING FAMILIES: A safe return after six months serving in Helmand Province in Afghanistan.

CAMPAIGN MEDAL: Soldiers from the London Regiment's Somme Company are decorated by the Lord Mayor.

Our brave soldiers are welcomed home

Report and photographs
by Bob Gertner

ON Sunday 14th October in the City of London, 140 of our troops who have been bravely serving in Helmand Province in Afghanistan for the past six months, took part in a homecoming parade at the Guildhall.

This was the first such parade in London and went ahead despite the recent debate about such welcoming home celebrations. In some areas of the country local councils have refused permission for such parades in case it causes offence to Muslim communities.

Hundreds of family members and friends waited in anticipation, clapping and waving as the soldiers marched into the main square of the Guildhall. These troops from the Somme Company of the London Regiment are mainly made up of Territorial Army recruits. They had been based at Camp Bastion since April, supporting the 12th Mechanised Brigade in operations against the Taliban and had only flown back to Britain three days earlier.

The London Regiment's role includes the provision of the Immediate Response Team, which provides protection for all the helicopter-borne medical teams. In the past six months the company has taken part in 200 evacuation missions, often coming under fire.

Major General Bill Cubbitt and the Lord Mayor issued all the men with operational medals before the men were dismissed to join their families in an emotional reunion.

After the parade the soldiers and their families were invited to a reception in the Guildhall. BNPTV was in attendance and captured the whole event for posterity.

It was uplifting to see our courageous soldiers given the recognition for the service they have given to their country. Local authorities across Britain and especially in our garrison towns should stop fretting about upsetting Muslim sensibilities and give our returning soldiers the Welcome Home parades they deserve.

LONDON REGIMENT: Provided protection for helicopter-borne medical teams.

JAMES TAYLOR: Co-opted on to Wakes Colne Council ahead of two other candidates.

Council post for Tory who joined BNP

JAMES Taylor decided to leave the Conservative Party and join the British National Party because of the issues of Europe, law & order, immigration and national identity. "The BNP's policies in these vital areas are much closer to my own thinking and desired way forward for this country," he said.

A self employed chartered engineer and member of the Institute of Instrument Engineers, James has lived for the past 27 years in Wakes Colne near Colchester. In May he was asked if he would be interested in filling a vacancy on the local parish council.

He attended the selection process in June where three prospective councillors were interviewed by the members of the council. After a short discussion James was co-opted on to the council with a majority of four votes over his nearest rival.

MORPETH: BNP market day stall with Dr Alan Patterson and friend.

Northumberland recruitment push

THE British National Party in the North East has started a major street sales, leafletting and recruitment drive in Northumberland leading up to the 2009 European Election.

Most street sales take place on a town's market day such as the one in Morpeth on 2nd October where Dr Alan Patterson, and the BNP stall there, did a brisk trade selling Freedom and were very well received by local shoppers.

Conservative council leader slams Cameron at Basildon BNP meeting

A former Conservative council leader Peter Strudwick, was the guest speaker at Basildon BNP's September meeting.

Peter told the audience that the final straw that forced him to relinquish his membership of the Tory Party was David Cameron's inane 'Hug a Hoody' speech.

It was a stinging attack on his former Party which was interrupted by waves of applause from many people who had experienced the same sort of disillusionment.

Supporting speaker was the always popular Matt Single, who denounced Britain's open door policies of the past 40 years which had seen the country swamped by an unmanageable number of immigrants.

PETER STRUDWICK: Laying into Cameron's New 'pink' Tories

Third Battle of Ypres remembered at BNP meeting in Scarborough

by Louise Scott

ONE of the guest speakers at the last meeting of Scarborough BNP was Alan O'Reilly, a Party activist from Teesside.

He spoke about the 90th anniversary of the 1917 Battle of Passchendaele also known as the third Battle of Ypres. Alan explained that there was only one surviving veteran of the campaign alive today - Harry Patch - and he had visited the scene of the battle earlier in the year.

"Harry was wounded, and his three comrades killed, on 22nd September 1917. He never forgot them. For him, 22nd September is his Remembrance Day," Alan told the audience.

The town of Ypres never forgot the British and Commonwealth sacrifices. Each night, at 8.00pm, the last post is sounded by buglers from the fire brigade. This ceremony began in 1929 and has continued daily since, apart from the years 1940-44, when Ypres was under German occupation. The ceremony takes place at the Menin Gate, which contains the names of almost 55,000 British and Commonwealth troops who have no known grave.

The solidarity of the Commonwealth at that time was illustrated by the quote "When England is at war, then Canada is at war. If England goes to Armageddon, Australia will go with her."

The First World War also saw the first use of mustard gas by the Germans, and Alan read out some harrowing descriptions of the suffering of those affected by its use, and those who nursed the wounded.

"Their fight is our fight", Alan concluded. "We must carry on and win as they did."

THEIR FIGHT IS OUR FIGHT: Teesside BNP activist Alan O'Reilly, with First World War memories. Soldiers of the 10th Field Artillery Brigade, Australian 4th Division on a duckboard track passing through Chateau Wood, near Hooze in the Ypres salient, on 29th October 1917.

First 'Freedom' sale in Sutton in Ashfield

ASHFIELD British National Party was only formed last November, yet in May at the local election in Kirkby in Ashfield a BNP candidate was just 18 votes short from being elected.

With another council by-election due, this time in Sutton in Ashfield, the group launched its campaign there last month setting up a stall in the picturesque Portland Square which attracted a steady stream of supporters.

"We sold out of everything we had," reported organiser Michael Clarke.

"And this was despite the attentions of a gang of soap dodgers from Nottingham anti-BNP. They tried to cause trouble but we ignored them and they got short shrift from at least three passers-by who berated them for their anti-democratic intimidation."

"After they had left with their tails between their legs, a local shopkeeper came out and complemented us for our restraint and decorum."

SWANSEA: Arthur Kemp, one of the new management team helping to streamline the British National Party, addresses the meeting.

Brave landlady stands up to the union bully boys

THERE was another excellent BNP meeting in Swansea on Saturday 6th October, with local speakers being joined by several guests including Sadie Graham, Matt Single and Arthur Kemp.

It was fortunate that the meeting went ahead after the landlady was inundated with a barrage of calls from people claiming to be representatives of the TGWU, Unison, and GMB unions 'advising' her not to allow the meeting to go ahead.

Thankfully, she was not to be intimidated and even asked the callers to come to the pub and discuss the issues worrying them with herself and her partner face to face. Of course none of them did. The brave lady told a representative of Swansea BNP:

"There have been in excess of two dozen of what can only be described as 'threatening' calls to me and whichever of my staff happened to be behind the bar at the time. Anonymous phone calls from gutless people to whom democracy is fine, just as long as it's their own very selective brand. I've no intention of giving in to these sort of bully boy tactics."

The meeting was a great success and further funds were raised to fight the next round of council elections in South Wales in May 2009.

Two Brum meetings on the same night

NICK Griffin paid a whistle stop visit to Birmingham last month speaking at two BNP meetings in the same evening.

First stop was East Birmingham where the BNP chairman was joined by Richard Lumby and organiser Denis Adams, on the top table and spoke on the pillars that underpin our society.

The end of the speech signalled the beginning of a social gathering for those present while Nick was off across the city to South Birmingham.

That meeting was already well underway with organiser Mike Bell, BNP manager Arthur Kemp and recent local election candidate Rob Purcell, all having addressed the audience.

A different meeting so it was a different speech from the Party's chairman, this time on the BNP's targets in the event of a snap General Election.

Waking up in Ulster

FOLLOWING a leaflet drop in Coleraine, Co. Londonderry, local residents aired their views in the town's Chronicle newspaper, providing the BNP with some very good publicity.

"This type of response is very common wherever the BNP leaflet in Ulster," says Ulster organiser Kieran Dinsmore.

"Slowly the people of Northern Ireland are beginning to realise there's a threat to our country, slipping in through the back door under the guise of boosting our economy but the reality of which will be lost jobs."

Making money and spreading the word

MORAY & Gordon BNP attended a carboot sale with all flags flying last month to raise vital funds for forthcoming elections.

As well as making money, the day's activity also brought a wealth of new contacts, with every customer receiving some BNP leaflets and a back issue of Freedom.

MONEYSPINNER: BNP carboot.

Group organiser Gary Raikes is enthusiastic about this sort of activity:

"We are already collecting for the next one because it's a great way of raising funds. Members sometimes find it easier to donate unwanted items than part with hard-earned cash."

"It also provides an opportunity for the public see a different face of the British National Party to the one the media tries to portray."

BNP IN HALIFAX

LAST MONTH the Halifax branch of the British National Party set up its first ever town centre stall.

Although in the past activists had sold newspapers, it had never been done before from an official BNP stall.

"After 15 minutes we had sold a dozen or so copies of Freedom, and by the end of our two hour stint we had sold out of this month's edition as well as all the back issues we had," reported a local branch official.

Fund-raising dinner in Bradford

ON Monday 8th October over 40 local members attended an exclusive fund-raising four course dinner in South Bradford.

Party Chairman Nick Griffin, was the after dinner speaker and he spoke about the need for the BNP to make a breakthrough at the 2009 European Election. Not only would this show the BNP as a serious player in British politics, it would also allow the Party to fund local community activities and to work with fellow European nationalists to help break up the European Union from within.

Yorkshire fund-raiser Peter Hollings, chaired the event which was a fantastic success, showing a £2,000 profit.

Every region should be looking to hold their own fund-raising dinners as they are not difficult to organise, bring together members for a social

Regular paper sales in Aberdeen

ABERDEEN held another city centre paper sale on Saturday 29th September.

Four members were on duty, Aberdeen organiser Steven Thomson, fundholder Mike Sweet, John Shackleton and Roy Jones.

The stall was set up in one of the busiest parts of Aberdeen and the day went well with plenty of copies of Freedom sold as well as the whole month's supply of Identity magazine.

"We shall be increasing our orders for both publications now we are regularly selling in the city," Steven Thomson told Freedom.

"What makes the effort rewarding is the response we get from the vast majority of people. We made some contacts and hopefully follow-up action will turn these into new members to our ever growing band of brothers."

Why Should Immigrants Have The Monopoly on Housing?

Why is it so many homes seem to go to asylum seekers or those from ethnic minority backgrounds?
Why is it that when young British couples go for a home they're put to the back of the list?
Why is it that the children of British families have to share bedrooms when new arrivals get homes with more space?

For the answer turn over!

OUR GREEN AND PLEASANT LAND BULLDOZED

STOP THE BUILDING!

Our countryside is vanishing beneath a tidal wave of concrete. Lanes, L.D. roads and the Tynes all support housing growth. Developers build up to 300,000 new houses every year for twenty years.

The politicians are even changing planning laws to strip from local authorities the right to stop developments that would ruin the countryside. Central government will give the green light to Brown's bulldozers!

All the extra greenfield development means more building on flood plains, less house ground, less space and more congestion. At a time when oil and energy supplies are running low and the whole world faces growing food shortages, this is all utter madness. Immigration is causing an environmental disaster!

Abbey Hulton carnival is back after 18 years thanks to the BNP

THANKS to the efforts of Stoke City BNP councillors Alby and Ellie Walker, the Abbey Hulton carnival was revived last month after an 18-year absence.

There was a medieval theme this year due to it taking place on the historic Hulton Abbey ruins site and Alby went as Henry 8th and Ellie as one of his wives.

The venue was especially relevant as the two Stoke councillors had helped to secure funding of £250,000 from English Heritage last year to rescue the Abbey site from being overgrown and falling into decay, which had made it a haven for gangs of unruly youths and illegal motor bike riding. "The carnival was a great success and plans are already under way for an even better one next year," Alby told Freedom.

"There were falconry displays, community stalls selling home made cakes etc, dancing troupes, a football penalty competition, a carnival queen, medieval displays with sword and pole fighting re-enactment, and displays. "The Fire Brigade attended at the request of Ellie due to her being a member of the County Fire Authority and provided water from a local hydrant as the site had no running water.

"Local Stoke farmer Mike Deaville, provided the children's entertainment similar to the act he also does for the BNP's own RWB Family Festival and it was amazing how many people entered into the spirit and dressed in medieval dress."

Alby Walker pioneered the battle to bring Hulton Abbey back into the community and out of the clutches of the jobs that were wrecking it. He campaigned hard and was successful in getting the site declared within an alcohol restriction zone which discouraged the youths and gave police additional powers to keep the Abbey a safe and welcoming place.

Nick Griffin speaks in Wolverhampton

by Steve Haddon

AROUND 60 BNP members and guests attended a Wolverhampton group meeting held on the outskirts of the city in South Staffordshire which is the semi-rural overspill for Wolverhampton's 'white flight'.

Although areas like this can be difficult for the BNP to operate in there is increasing support building up in villages like Wombourne, Essington, Featherstone and Codsall. Wolverhampton BNP hope that this interest will lead to candidates standing in the South Staffordshire area next May.

Phil Reddall the organiser for Shropshire town Market Drayton, was the first guest speaker of the night. Phil spoke on the need for everybody to become involved with the British National Party, to follow their hearts and to do what they know feel is right for their country and its people.

Next to speak was South Staffs joint co-ordinator Mike Mulvihill. Mike used his locally renowned North East wit to have the meeting roaring with laughter with the tales of his first involvement in the nationalist movement during the 1970's, through to the hair raising experience of canvassing for the Tories during the 1984 miners' strike in County Durham. And then back to seeing the light and joining the BNP after witnessing the utter madness of multi-culturalism and political correctness.

After a short break it was time for the main guest speaker of the evening, Nick Griffin. He explained how circumstances both national and international will help propel the British National Party to victory over the coming years.

North Bucks BNP holds its first meeting

THE recently formed North Bedfordshire group of the British National Party held its first meeting on 10th October.

It was chaired by Regional Organiser Eddy Butler, and the guest speakers were British National Party councillors Richard Barnbrook and Simon Deacon, who each gave an informative and motivational address. North Bedfordshire organiser Phill Carter, was delighted with the turnout on the evening:

"In total 45 people attended, including many new members and prospective members," she told Freedom.

"We had people coming forward to help with leafletting and Freedom sales and in addition, a dozen or so membership forms were taken home."

Phill spoke on BNP policy and the importance of getting our message over to the public. The sight of this confident young lady rallying the troops certainly helped reassure those potential new members, and dispelled any misconceptions that the BNP was anything like the distorted view promoted in the media.
